The Man Who Lost Himself

By H. De Vere Stacpoole (1863-1951)

Best known for his literary work The Blue Lagoon, which has been made into film several times over, H. De Vere Stacpoole's first publication was a book titled The Intended in 1894. Stacpoole was disappointed at its lack of commercial success, and felt the story was too good to let go. He eventually re-worked the book, culminating in The Man Who Lost Himself, a light-hearted story of a luckless American visiting London on yet another of his failed business ventures, when he happens upon a gentleman of status and wealth, who also just happens to be his exact look-alike.
